Figurative Language Concerning Wakefulness in Walden. Walden's second chapter, Where I Lived, and What I Lived For, introduces the figurative language concerning wakefulness, beginning with Thoreau's morning routine, which he deems a "religious exercise." Thoreau delights in the opportunity that morning presents, deeming it "a cheerful invitation" to draw closer to Nature and one's own self by shedding the sleepiness that accumulates within a person because of day-to-day life.

Wakefulness Metaphors in Thoreau's Walden

A metaphor can be thought of as a figure of speech in which one class of things is referred to as if it belonged to another class. Whereas a simile states that A is like B, a metaphor states that A is B or substitutes B for A. Some metaphors are explicit, like Shakespeare's line from As You Like It: "All the world's a stage."

Simile and Metaphor—What's the Difference? While both similes and metaphors are used to make comparisons, the difference between similes and metaphors comes down to a word. Similes use the words like or as to compare things—"Life is like a box of chocolates.". In contrast, metaphors directly state a comparison—"Love is a battlefield."

Simile and Metaphor—What's the Difference? | Grammarly

Metaphors, similes, and analogies are three literary devices used in speech and writing to make comparisons. Each is used in a different way. Identifying the three can get a little tricky sometimes: for example, when it comes to simile vs. metaphor, a simile is actually a subcategory of metaphor, which means all similes are metaphors, but not all metaphors are similes.
