1991, television writer Paul Haggis was inspired to pen this story about social and racial tension in Los Angeles, California. The film's unique combination of a star-studded cast—including Don Cheadle, Sandra Bullock, and Terrence Howard—and relatively-low budget demonstrated the “passion” behind the project.

Crash. Crash. NARRATIVE
Crash tells the story of a group of very different people and the way in which their lives intersect over a period of twenty-four hours. As the film begins, each episode in the narrative seems separate and unrelated but as the story progresses, the lives of these different characters are woven together in an intricate tale of how human beings react to, and interact with, each other.
